Constant Dullaart Wins Prix Net Art

Rhizome, the Beijing-based Chronus Art Center, and Tsinghua University Art and Science Media Lab today announced that Dutch artist Constant Dullaart has been awarded the second annual Prix Net Art, an international prize for internet art that comes with an award of ten thousand dollars. A five thousand dollar award of distinction was also granted to the Berlin-based collective Weise7. Dullaart will discuss the future of net art during a new art and technology conference presented by Rhizome and the New Museum in January 2016.

The jury which decided the winners this year comprised critic Josephine Bosma; Whitney Museum curator Chrissie Iles; and critic and curator Domenico Quaranta.
